Report One of the most important developments in education worldwide in modern times is cooperative learning. Starting in the 1960s, this innovation is spreading throughout the world, signifying a fundamental change in how learners learn and teachers teach. Why is it growing? Because, when teachers are well trained in it and use it regularly in the classroom and the playground, the end result, as shown by the results of over 900 research studies, is significantly higher achievement and improved social interactions among the students.
